The Limits of Civilization.

It was amusing to see negroes with the thickest of lips veiled. All the pretty faces were more or less painted and the eyelids and eyebrows penciled. The quality of the paint showed the quality of the lady. Poor women dand themselves with horrid pigments. No Turkish gentleman goes out to walk with his wife. To do so would be counted in the highest degree absurd. At most she is followed by a slave. But, wrapped up in the ugly black silk fardie, she can go where she pleases and alone. No man would dream of looking at a veiled lady in a fardie. Were a Giaour to scan her face, he would run a risk of being massacred. Shopping is a feminine pastime. Another is holding receptions, which, of course, ladies only attend. Much of the sweets and renders Constantinople belies grossly fat while still young and rather spoils their teeth. All over the east teeth are even, white and of medium size and months well shaped. They are months made for laughter, gormandizing and sensual love. Eastern women are far better looking in youth than western. Those of Stamboul are the least graceful. They are seldom neat about the ankles. Their stockings are not well drawn up, their shoes are a world too big, and their gait is heavy and shuffling. —London Truth.

Know How.

Friend (making a call)—You are not looking very robust. Do you enjoy good health?
Mrs. Stay-at-Holme (with a sigh)—Indeed I do! But I hardly ever have a chance to. —Chicago Tribune.

The woman who wears an armor of good health protects herself against almost all the ordinary ills and troubles that beset her sex. The woman who takes proper care of her health of her womanly self, who is careful that the organs that constitute womanhood are always well and strong, will be happy in her womanhood and capable in her motherhood.

The best and most useful of all medicines for women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It acts directly upon the delicate feminine organism. It makes it strong and healthy. It cures all weakness and disease. It prepares a woman for her greatest mission, motherhood. It does away with the usual discomforts of the expectant period. It insures the health of baby and makes its advent easy and almost painless. Over 100,000 women have testified to its wonderful virtues. More of it is sold than of all other medicines for this purpose combined. Women who want to know more about it should write to the discoverer, Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y.

"The best doctors in Kansas City told me that unless I went to the hospital and had an operation performed I could not live," writes Miss Brodie Galloway, of Wilder, Johnson Co., Kans. I had ulceration and weakness, and each month I would get down in bed and suffer severely for twenty-four hours. I could not keep anything on my stomach for five minutes at a time. I have taken four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and am now well. I owe it all to your medicine. I can cheerfully recommend it to any suffering as I did."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are a safe, sure, speedy and permanent cure for constipation. They never gripe. One is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. All medicine dealers.

TIMING BIG PROJECTILES.

How Their Initial Velocity Is Calculated In Tests at Sandy Hook.

To the layman one of the interesting features in a big gun test is the method by which the initial velocity of the projectile is calculated. When he hears that the modern high power guns often expel a shot at an initial velocity of 2,000 feet a second, a rate that if sustained would mean a mile in three seconds, he realizes the difficulty of calculating the speed. An ordnance officer must have accurate knowledge of the velocity of a projectile, that he may predict its range and penetration and determine the accuracy of the gun. It is a comparatively easy matter, however, with the new instruments to calculate accurately the initial velocity of a projectile, and any one who is fortunate enough to visit Sandy Hook when big guns are being tested may see how it is done.

Two open frames are set up 150 feet apart in front of the gun. Wires are stretched back and forth across these frames, making a screen through which the shot must pass. The wires in each screen form a complete electric circuit, which includes also an electric battery and an electro magnet. The projectile, after leaving the gun, flies through the wire in the first screen, interrupting the circuit and releasing the armature of the magnet. In a space of time so small as to be hardly conceivable the projectile has covered the distance between the two frames and pierced the wire in the second, interrupting its electric current and releasing the armature of its magnet, as in the first case. The interval between the drop of these two armatures represents the time spent by the projectile in traveling 150 feet. This time is indicated by the chronograph in the laboratory near by. Wires run from each screen to the laboratory, which is fitted up with batteries and switchboards.

The armature of the first electro magnet is an iron rod about 3 feet long, which is suspended vertically. This rod falls when the second electro magnet is placed a little below the first, and when it is released it acts as a knife, and, striking the side of the falling rod, makes a slight mark. The distance of this out mark from the end of the rod indicates the distance through which the rod has dropped while the projectile is passing from one screen to another. This forms the unit for the calculation of the projectile's velocity in feet per second. Now explosives and high power guns have increased the initial velocity of projectiles wonderfully in the last few years. Projectiles may be expelled now with a force that will make them effective at a range far beyond ordinary eyesight. —New York Sun.

Roman Epitaphs.

When at its zenith, the Roman empire laid all the barbaric countries of the world under contribution to supply the tables of its nobles and wealthy citizens with the fine luxuries of life. Asia and Africa poured in the rich spices and fruits of the tropics; Germany and the great north countries raised the grains and wild berries; Italy and the fertile land of the Franks cultivated the vineyards to make or express the wines; every strip of seacoast from the Mediterranean to the Baltic contributed its quota of fish, and the forests of Brittany yielded the wild game of the woods—birds, beasts and fowls—for the banquets of the proud, dissolute rulers of the vast empire. With the choice products of a great world so easily obtained there were wanton waste, foolish extravagance and a strange disregard of the value of expensive luxuries, and the historian dwelling upon these times delights in recapitulating the various articles of diet arranged in tempting manner upon the gilded tables at the great feasts and banquets.

But, excepting Nero's dish of peacock tongues and Cleopatra's cup of wine with the dissolved pearls in it, the menu of our modern banquets would compare favorably with those spread in the times when gluttony, licentiousness and greed for luxury were insidiously sapping the strength of Rome. —George E. Walsh in Lippincott's.

HIRAM DART'S REFUSAL.

Why He Did Not Marry the Charming Widow Breese.

When old Hiram Dart was in his seventy-fifth year, the faithful old wife who had been his companion for a full half-century, sickened and died, and to the surprise and amusement of his neighbors, old Hiram set forth in search of another wife before Hannah, his first wife, had been six weeks in her grave.

He made no secret of the fact that he was "in the market" and seemed surprised that the bidders were so few. He attributed this fact to the general lack of taste and judgment in the "wimmen folk" of the present day.

"They're a flimsy lot anyhow," said old Hiram, "an it comes of this fool new wimmen idea."

One day old Hiram drove by a neighbor's house all "rigged up" in his Sunday best and with a blue satin necktie forming a marked contrast to the big red geranium in his buttonhole. He carried for a moment at his neighbor's gate and frankly confessed that he was "goin a sparkin'."

The object of this amatory visitation was the Widow Breese, who lived "over Hebron way," and with whom old Hiram was wholly unacquainted. Some one had, in a spirit of either malice or mischief, made old Hiram believe that the Widow Breese, a robust, well-to-do woman of about 60, would be inclined to look with favor on Hiram's suit.

"An it won't be no harm done to go an see her anyway," said Hiram, as he drove away.

It was nearly dark when Hiram reappeared, far less buoyant than when he went away. His neighbor was on the lookout, and, hailing the old man, he said:

"Well, Uncle Hiram, did the Widow Breese refuse you?"

"Not much she didn't," retorted Hiram spiritedly. "I refused her."

"You refused her? Why, what do you mean, Uncle Hiram?"

"Mean jess what I say. I refused the old—old—catymount!"

"Why, Uncle Hiram, is that a respectful way to speak about a lady?"

"A lady? Humph, great lady old Jane Breese is! You call a woman a 'lady' who sails into a feller with a broomstick an calls 'im 'an ole fool' an sich like names?"

"Did Mrs. Breese do that?"

"She jest did. I guess she'd got wind that I was comin, for I'd hardly interposed myself an began to state my business when she flew at me with a broomstick an drenched me with hot water an sicked her davg on me an jawed the worst I ever heerd. I jest waited till she got through, an then I up an told her I jest took that I wouldn't have her if it was the last wimmen on top of the state. You, sir, I found her jest that pint black!" —District Free Press.

Medicine and the Present.

The great improvement in the present as compared with the past methods of administering medicine is a very important one. Scarcely a generation ago the patient of a dose of the poisonous drops of the day was sufficient to suppress the worst of evil propensities in the most wicked boy. When actually in need of medication, he was held by the chair and gagged to exhaustion in the parental anxiety to measure the capacity of his unwilling stomach with the bulky contents of the justly hated bottle. Frequently the struggle had more to do with the perpetration than the medicine. Very often, for obvious reasons, the hot tea broke before the fever. Castor oil was a punishment, not a remedy, and seemed an abomination.

The nauseous mixtures of our grandfathers are now replaced by the elegant and almost tasty compounds of modern pharmacy. The essentials of the former medicines are now given in the form of condensed extracts and tablets, in proportionately reduced bulk and in consistently concentrated form. Single remedies with special indications take the place of the old-fashioned miscellanies. Tablets, pills and pills no longer offend the palate, and even quinine, the bitter enemy of taste, now comes for favor in sugar coated armor. The invitable stomach which denies the usual approach to the internal economy is now diplomatically circumvented by an ingenious water the skin, which, although a longer way round, has a sure way home. —Dr. George H. Hardy in Forum.

Washington Well Fortified.

In view of the fact that the national capital was once taken and burned by a foreign enemy it is reassuring to know that a calamity so humiliating is not likely to occur again, even in case of sudden war.

Washington is the best defended city in the country. A hostile fleet could not now ascend the Potomac, as was done in 1814, when President Madison and his wife were compelled to make a hurried escape across the Potomac to avoid capture by the British.

For military and prudential reasons little has been allowed to be made known concerning the new works and the heavy ordnance recently installed below the city, but for some years engineers have been busy at the river forts. Some very formidable guns are now in position there, and a system of torpedo defenses has been perfected which would render the approach of an enemy's warships within 15 miles of Washington practically impossible.

The defensive works are located at the "belbow," or turn, of the Potomac where old Forts Washington and Stanton stood, and where at one point the channel for vessels of deep draft is but 800 yards wide.

The guns are protected on the water side by emplacement walls of stone and concrete 70 feet thick, and on the land side by redoubts for infantry.

The rapidly increasing wealth and importance of Washington, the grand new public buildings and the vast sums of money and bullion in the treasury render these protective and defensive measures a matter of national importance and necessity. —Youth's Companion.

SHERMAN ON TRUSTS.

John Sherman exchanged his seat in the United States Senate with M. A. Hanna for a place in the Cabinet. Notwithstanding the apparent disposition of Mr. Sherman to oblige Mr. Hanna the two statesmen do not seem to pull together on all occasions. Mr. Hanna believes in trusts, especially since they contributed liberally to the corruption fund in the Presidential campaign. Mr. Sherman, for some cause, seems to be opposed to all trusts, except the gold trust. In an interview with the New York World Mr. Sherman says "the trust question is the most important of the day." While a combination of persons engaged in a common business would seem on its face to be a fair matter, in reality such combinations prevent healthful competition and control the output and prices. Mr. Sherman favors making unlawful in the most direct manner all combinations in restraint of trade, as they put all industries in the control of a few men, and the people have a right to open competition in all industries and trades.

If Mr. Hanna and Mr. Sherman really disagree regarding trusts it is possible that the public may be benefited. It is probable, however, that these gentlemen are merely trying to hoodwink the public. Mr. Sherman is a sly old con, and he doubtless has some ulterior motive for talking as he does against trusts and taking issue with Mr. Hanna and other prominent members of his party. Perhaps his aim is to attempt to divert attention from the monetary question, by describing the evils of trusts. He has been associated with syndicates and combinations so long that every act of his, whether intended to benefit the trusts or the public, is looked upon with suspicion. The people have no confidence in him, and, though he may, now in his old age, with millions at his disposal, endeavor to make amends for some of his former misdeeds, very many will doubt his sincerity until he has absolute proof that he is not trying to deceive them. As we cannot just yet be accurate in judging Mr. Sherman, let us be charitable and hope, if nothing more, that he will take up the cudgel against Mr. Hanna and in behalf of the people.

In 1860 it cost $1 91 per head to run the Government. Now it costs 5 48. But these figures do not tell the whole story, for the $1 91 was paid when prices of produce were higher than they are now. How would it do to bridge over any little deficiency that may occur in the treasury, by a little old-fashioned economy? No living man can give good reason for our spending more money per capita than we did in 1860 or during the war. Excessive taxation is more apt to make hard times than a general depression of business. It is very evident, the nation, States, cities and boroughs want more economy and smaller appropriations.—Acme, O., Herald

The Cuban question has taken on a new aspect and bids fair to cause civil strife in the republic of Mexico. Our sister republic is torn by the personal enmity of Cuban refugees and sympathizers and supporters of the Spanish Government. Both factions are organizing clubs and societies throughout the land and large sums are being subscribed to support the different principals. It is reported that Spanish adherents recently contributed half a million dollars in gold coin to support the mother country in its policy of subjugation.

A recent editorial quotes Secretary of the Treasury saying as commenting upon the favorable turn things have taken and saying that recent evidence from all parts of the country show an increase in trade and manufactures. Let us hope that McKinley's wave of prosperity may reach Nevada in the near future. If the weather of the last two weeks could be taken as a criterion it would appear that the wave of prosperity had given this section of the country a decidedly cold shoulder.

The demand for horse meat has greatly increased in Europe and an Oregon company proposes to supply it. A company which commenced operations at Linton, near Portland, two years ago, had to shut down, as it was unable to find a market for canned horse meat. Now the company has resumed business, but instead of canning the meat it will salt it in casks for shipment. About forty horses a day are slaughtered and salted down.

It is generally conceded now that the International Monetary Commission appointed by the President has nothing but defeat before it. Senator Stewart thinks that William McKinley has not enough influence with the Administration to accomplish anything for silver or even to bring any relief to the country through a tariff. Mr. McKinley means well enough, but he is as putty in the hands of Mr. Hanna.

The House of Representatives met yesterday and remained in session just long enough to call the roll. The weather is warm at the National Capital and Oscar Reed is quite fleshy, which is a sufficient reason for his action or rather inaction.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

The Democratic State convention of Ohio met at the city of Columbus yesterday. It was almost unanimously for free silver and John R. McLean for United States Senator. L. T. Neal, who was defeated by President McKinley for Governor, ex-Mayor Farley and other gold standard Democrats, were active for McLean but divided on Governor Robert. T. Hough was the favorite for Governor. Paul Sorg had good support, but the fact that he had voted for the issue of gold bonds while in Congress was used strongly against him. John C. Welby and Horace L. Chapman showed considerable strength as candidates. It is thought that it will take several ballots to decide the choice. D. D. Donovan is a dark horse and may come to the front to-day in place of Hough. On all sides it was determined that no man should be selected who had a gold streak in his make up. While Hough is conceded to be a Bryan man and that he advocated the free silver plank at the Chicago convention, the fact that he wore a Carlsbad button one day in Washington was used as damaging evidence against him. This report was denied but it was evident that it had its effect. The determination of the McLean men to nominate Hough may cause some disaffection in the McLean ranks. The McLean men held several conferences during the day.

A dynamite explosion occurred at Scranton, Pa., yesterday morning, blowing up the business block of Leon Olchowski and his residence. The cause of the explosion is unknown, but it is claimed to be the work of political and church enemies. Olchowski was seriously injured while saving his wife from the burning buildings and two children had a narrow escape. The loss is $25,000.

Louis Gallot, a New Orleans bank official, who in connection with Louis C. Colomb, the bookkeeper abstracted $300,000 from the Union National Bank by juggling the balances so as to always show a credit to Gallot, was found guilty yesterday on sixty counts in the indictments. Colomb had previously committed suicide.

The Treasury Department has received advice that a large number of Chinese admitted into the country as participants in the Tennessee Exposition are leaving Tennessee for San Francisco, Sacramento and other cities thus evading the spirit and letter of the law authorizing their admission.

Charles Zechan, paying teller of the German American National Bank at St. Paul, charged with stealing several thousand dollars from the bank pleaded guilty and will be sentenced to-day.

The Debbs colonization scheme has not been abandoned as reported. Some of the leaders yet hope that eventually they will get into power and revolutionize the social system.

It is now stated that the police will not permit the fight to take place in Brooklyn between Fitzsimmons and Sullivan. They were to meet on July 5th.

Harvey Allender was again sentenced at San Jose yesterday to be hanged on September 3d and was returned to San Quentin prison.

W. J. Bryan gains in favor and popularity as the months roll by. His name now appears in the newspapers about as much as it did during the campaign of 1896. His arguments have taken a firm hold on the people, and backed by the cause of bimetalism, he seems to be a man of destiny, and the one to save the country from destruction.

An exchange, commenting on President McKinley's message on Cuba, says if he has any influence with the Administration he ought to acknowledge the independence of Cuba and justify by Mr. McKinley's speeches and writings in the past there are a great many things that he ought to do if he has any influence with the Administration.

MASSACHUSETTS is up in arms. The Senate has placed an ad valorem tariff of twenty per cent on hides and the shoemakers of New England are in open revolt against the party. They cannot see why the Western farmer should derive any benefit from a tariff bill designed expressly to benefit Eastern trusts and manufacturers.

Sunday's Accidents

The Enterprise records two accidents on the Geiger Grade on last Sunday. A Reno couple were the victims of one, their horse ran away and smashed the buggy, but the occupants were lucky enough to escape uninjured. The second accident occurred to John Graze and wife while driving on the grade. Their horse became frightened at the first wreck and plunged over the grade throwing Mr. and Mrs. Graze out of the rig and in the general mix up, the horse stepped on Mr. Graze injuring him seriously. Mrs. Graze forced it in to town and sent a rig out for her husband. Upon his arrival in Virginia it was found that he had a rib broken, besides being badly bruised up.

On For Yosemite.

Miss Frances Short, Miss Echo Loder and mother, Miss Frances Frey and Miss Flora Northrop leave on a trip to Yosemite valley to-day. They will go south via Genoa and through Carson Valley. They go in a comfortable spring wagon and Miss Frey will handle the ribbons over two good, strong horses. They will visit other interesting points in the course of their journey.

Practical Meals.
Almost any dish which had to recommend it rarity, costliness, in "gastronomy," and, to our way of thinking, taste, was sure to take with the Roman epicure. And if he were unable to make it costly any other way he would add powdered precious stones or gold dust. Nero dined on one occasion from a peacock which was sprinkled with diamonds, and specimens of that bird dressed with gold or with crushed pearls were by no means a rarity at the triclinia of the moneyed Romans. A dish of parrots' tongues was a great delicacy. But a dish of parrots' tongues which had been capable, when in their proper place, of framing words, was of almost incalculable value, which increased in a direct ratio with the vocabularies of the defunct parrots.
Another bird for which the Roman epicure was in the habit of paying fabulous prices was the phoenix, which is believed to have been the phoenix. It had its home in the most northerly parts of Scotland and Norway, and as this made it hard to get at the Romans appreciated it all the more and put it in the same rank with ostriches, peacocks and parrots. The tongues of these birds were specially prepared, together with the brains, and took the place which a hors d'oeuvre would now take.—New York Post
Her Point of View.
They were discussing the construction of a new gown
"From a hygienic point of view and merely as a matter of health," urged the dressmaker, "I think it should be made!"
The haughty beauty stopped her by a gesture.
"Hygienic point of view!" she exclaimed. "Matter of health! What has that to do with it? When I want health, I will go to a doctor. When I want style, I come to you. We will now eliminate all absurdities and discuss this purely from a common sense standpoint. Will it be fashionable and becoming?"

The Paper of the Oxford Bibles.
A paper in Long for Oxford Bibles is a specially important and interesting part of the work. At Wakefield, a mile or two out of Oxford, the university has a large mill for the supply of its requirements. A good deal of the paper they take out here is made out of old ships' sails, the materials of which, after battling with storms in all quarters of the world, come here for the purpose of being made into paper, printed in most every language under heaven. Most every language under heaven is bound up into volumes to be used in the great libraries of the world. The Oxford Bibles are made of this paper, and the great reputation that Oxford has acquired in the production of Bibles and other devotional books. Twenty years ago and more the management here let on valuable inventions in paper making, and ever since their "India paper" has been the envy and the puzzle of manufacturers all over the kingdom. The paper is said to be only three-pence a yard, and though the process has been long legally protected and all the world is free to imitate the extreme quality, but the thoroughly opaque and wonderfully strong and durable paper of the Oxford Bibles is that they only know, and all the world has hidden to quite failed to do so.
It is as thin as tissue, but perfectly opaque and so strong that a strip of it three inches wide has proved to be capable of sustaining a quarter of a hundredweight. Over 100 works and editions are now printed on this paper. This special advantage is very largely helped Oxford to retain the leading position when it comes to the printing of books, and to the first printer of books in the kingdom and by the prestige of the Oxford Bibles.—Chambers' Journal.
